Introduction

The Book of Job is an important book of the Bible (Old Testament).

It tells the story of a righteous and faithful man named Job who suffers greatly but continues to trust in God.

The book mainly discusses suffering, patience, faith, and God's justice.

Story of Job

Job was a very good, honest, and God-fearing man.

He was also rich and had a happy family.

According to the story, Satan says that Job is faithful only because he is prosperous.

God allows Satan to test Job's faith.

After this:

Job loses his wealth.

His children die.

He becomes seriously ill.

Even after so much suffering, Job does not curse God.

He feels deep pain and asks why he is suffering, but he still keeps his faith.

Friends and Debate

Job's friends come to comfort him, but they argue that:

Suffering must be punishment for sin.

Job disagrees because he knows he is innocent.

This creates a long discussion about justice, suffering, and God's will.

God's Reply

At the end, God speaks to Job from a storm.

God does not give a direct reason for Job's suffering.

Instead, He shows that:

Divine wisdom is greater than human understanding.

Humans cannot fully understand God's plans.

Job becomes humble and accepts God's wisdom.

Ending

Because of Job's patience and faith, God:

Restores his health

Gives him more wealth than before

Blesses him with a new family and long life
